Shanghai, May 7. The Communist armies today blasted a gap in Shanghai's strongly fortified outer defence arc, struck against the Northern approaches to the North Eastern Shantung port of Tsingtao where the United States West Pacific Fleet is based, and rapidly closed in on Nanchang, the Western terminus of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway, in intensified operations on all civil war fronts, according to official and press reports received here.

The retired President's decision was apparently precipitated by a letter sent in this week by Acting President Li Tsung-jen who said he would rather go abroad as a private citizen than remain in the government under the Generalissimo,-United Press.

Canton, May 7. A formal reply from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to Acting President Li Tsung-jen's demand for full Presidential powers was today delivered to the Acting President at Kweilin, it is authoritutively learned.

A close adviser to Acting Presisident Li said the reply was mild In tone and fair in its contents. He said that he could not give any further details.

It is reliably understood that the Generalissimo had agreed to at least some of the terms which the Acting President had laid down as essential before he would resume his post as head of the Government in Canton,-Associated Press.

HK--Vital Link In

London, May 7. The "Daily Mail" said today that Hong Kong was "vital link in the American Pacific frontier, stretching from Japan to the Philippines," and "concerted" Anglo-American action must be taken for its defence. "They must prepare, if need be, to run convoys to Hong Kong with proper air cover. There is still time to show the Chinese Reds that Britain means to hold Hong Kong. Definite statements that Britain will defend the island with all the means at her disposal must be accompanied by proper defence measures."

The paper pointed out that the reservoir that supplied the Hong Kong community with water was in leased territory on the mainland, between the Kowloon airfield and the Chinese frontier. To hold, the line of that frontier would require a far greatent fore than that which now garrisons Hong Kong, even it the garrison is reinforced up to the strongth contemplated."- Weuter.

SYNGMAN RHEE WANTS ANSWER AMERICA

President Syngman Rhoe of the South Korean government wants to know whether the United States would regard invasion across the 38th Parallel by the Soviet-dominated North Korean Republic as "tantamount to attack on the American people."

Rhee, in a press statement today, said this question was of "far greater importance than the mere question whether or not the remaining American troops will stay in Korea."

(American: officials have indicated the 8,000 United States troops now in Korea will be withdrawn by late summer). The President also asked the case of attack by an outside power, would the Republic of South Koren be able to count upon all-out American military

There is nothing that Britain or Hong Keng wants less than war either with a Communistically governed China or anyone else. Every interest that we have points in the other direction. Britain with her ally America remains, however, incomparably the strengest power in the world Neither of them can or would allow builditry in matters touching themselves. Upon other hand, it is impossible to believe that the Communist armies of China have any intention of laying hands upon Hong Kong. That would mean all-out war with Britain and under all the circumstances of the case war with America as well. China too will require the friendship of Britain and American (and can get it) just as much

There are many who take the view that conditions which are likely to exist when an emergency does arise cannot be campared to those which existed in 1941. The argument is put forward that though Hong Kong still be deficient in mambers, the Colony's defences will now have a potential dissumpive power that must command respect.

What, may one ask, will Hong Kong's defences be able to achieve if the enemy resorts to the fomenting of teternal trouble and the isolation of this Colony In so far as trade with the Chinese Mainland is concerned? Hong Kong owes its present

Graphic Of Gun Duel

Graphic accounts of the gun duel in the Yangtse River between HMS London and Communist artillery last month were given by a cross section of the cruiser's personnel on their arrival here yesterday from Shanghai.

Highlights of the various narrations included a close "shave" when a Communist shell dropped about 10 yards from the magazine, and an anxious moment when water rushed in through a four-foot hole causing her to list four degrees.

"Damage suffered was super-

DECLARATION BY U.S. ON JAPAN POLICY

Eventual Restoration To The Family Of Nations TOKYO'S WIDER

Washington, May 7. The United States declared yesterday that Japan should be given - more power over its international relations as a step toward restoring Japan eventually to the family of nations.

A formal State Department policy declaration said that if Japan is given limited responsibilities in several international fields it would speed her economic recovery and help prepare it for the end of the occupation. The specific fields suggested included trade promotion, citizenship and property problems, cultural relations, and technical and scientific arrangements and exchanges.

Gland Discovery

Restores Youth

Sufferers from loss of vigour, nerventances, weak body, impure blood, failing memory, and who are old and worn-out before their time will be delighted to learn of a new gland discovery by an American Doctor.

This new discovery makes it possible to quickly and easily restore vigour to your glands and body, to build rich, pure blood, to strengthen your mind and memory and feel like a new man in only I days. In fact, this discovery, which is a home medicine in pleasant, easy-to-take tablet form, does away with gland operations and begins to build new vigour and energy in it hours, yet it is absolutely harmless and natural in action.

The success of this amaxing discovery, called Vi-Tabs has been so great in America that it is now being distributed by all chamists here under a guarantee of complete satisfaction or money back. In other words, Vi-Tabs must make you feel full of vigour and energy and from lote to years younger, or you merely return the empty peckage and get your money back. A special, double-strength bottle of 43 Viscour and the guarantee protects you.

Something New For Smugglers

In Mexico ingenuity has been taxed to its limits by gold smugglers with something new in the way of smuggling.

Gold, explains Ceall Clark, while bringing fantastic prices in Europe's black markets, still sells at its international value in Mexico. As a result, scarcely a week passon without someone being arrested trying to smuggle gold coins out of the country. The export of such coins is forbidden without a permit-and permits are never granted.

Occasionally, smugglers attempt to "run" money out of the country by plane or ship, directly to Spain or Italy. Now, however, there is a new smuggler's gateway,through Guntemula on Mexico's Southern border.

Along this border is the chicle region where both Guatemala and Mexico produce much of the raw material used in making chewinggum. Into this chicle go the gold coins that claim such a high price abroad. Once over the border, the coins are extracted from the chicle and shipped freely to Europe. Should-one of the smugglers be careless in his checking there may still be gold in that penny packet of chewing-gum.

BASES IN SPAIN

Lake Success, May 6. Russia, backing a Polish call for a ban on arms exports to Spain, today accused the Western Powers of supporting General Franco's regime with a view to using it in a future aggressive war.

The Soviet Deputy Foreign plleged in the United Nations' for building a network of airfields in the Iberian Peninsula and in Spanish North Africa,

"Franco Spain has a significant place in the plans of the Anglo-American bloc who desire world mastery," he said. The Polish proposal also recommended United Nations members to refrain from any agreements or treatics with Spain, Mr. James Plimsoll, Australia, said he is not convinced that it is necessary for the Assembly to take any action to change the present position. The Franco Government is no more a threat to peace than it had been in 1946 when the Assembly decided it did not constitute such a threat.

Belgium, Egypt and Ecuador supported a Bolivian proposal that United Nations members should have the right to send Ambassadors to Madrid. The Committee adjourned until Cummings was now shouting and pounding on the door. Pat knew that the hall was probably crowded with the curious. But he didn't have much time to worry about that as Toad was bringing the muzzle of his gun down upon them.

Marjorie screamed as Pat fired first, then she fainted. He felt her body shiver, and relax, against him. He released her arm.

Toad's gun was blown from his hand. He looked for an amazed second at his bleeding hand, then dived for the fire escape.

Pat pulled free of the dead weight of Marjorle's body—and hurled himself in a long flying tackle across the room. He crashed against the window sill, his hands closing around Toad's ankle.

prop the man up before him as he remembered the slugging in Sylvia's car, the attack in the station washroom. Pat kept punching until his red hot passion subsided. Then he stood panting for a few moments, looking down at the beaten goon.

Suddenly he heard shoulders driven hard against the apartment door. And the night was split by police sirens. Raffigan felt his heart pound. Dropping Marjorie's automatic into his coat pocket and loaving her on the floor, he stepped through the window and went down the fire escape as the shrill of police sirens increased. A long, black automobile was parked across the street from the Arbor Apartments. With the tiny automa-

The street was alive with searchlights, police and patrol cars. A city

"I've found the body of Mr. Harling's son, Rodney," Raffigan told him. Pat regreted the bluntness of his announcement, but there was no way to spare the heart broken old man.

Three policemen, the detective and a police photographer accompanied Harling and Raffigan up the spartment elevator to the fourth floor.

They met Cummings alone in the hallway. He appeared cool, immaculate, unruffled. Raffigan thought:

What trick was the hotel manager blanning now?
"Take him along," Pat said to the detective, "and go to 421. The body is there."

Cummings shrugged the policeman's hand from his arm, smiling smugly at Raffigan. "Are you instant?" he inquired silkily. "421 is vacant. It's the only vacancy in the building!"

Raffigan grinned grimly. "I don't think 421 is quite vacant," he said. "I left it five minutes ago all but littered with dead and dying."

Cummings shrugged, produced a

"It won't work," Pat said. "The bolt is pushed on the inside."

The hotel manager regarded him pityingly as he twisted the key in the lock and the door opened easily.

Raffigan stared in amazement. The room was immaculate. The picture of Rodney Harling was gone. There was no sign of the fight. The bedroom was neat. Not even the expensive evening gown remained. There was no trace of Rodney's corpse.

The city detective looked at Pat narrowly.

"Of course they've cleaned it out," Raffigan said hollowly, "Miss Gammage must have opened the door for Cummings maybe Toad...But they're in this building somewhere. Have the the police search the whole place!"

"Without a warrant?" Cummings inquired softly. "Most tenants would object. I think this man is insane, officer. I think you'd better take him away."

Raffigan waited no longer. He grabbed Cummings, suddenly and hurled him as hard as he could send him against the detective. Before anyone else in the room could stop him. Pat sped through the door slamming it.

The stairway was before him, but he ran beyond it. The elevator stood open, but he speck past it. He ran along the hall until he threw open a closet door. At first only piles of towels, pillow cases and sheets met his harried gaze. Then he saw the skull-and-cross bones label of a potent acid.

He remembered the burn on his neck.
He grabbed up the dangerous bottle and ran again, leaving the closet doors ajar. A bullet sang over his head.
They were giving him a chance to and, to keep the lift from answering any calls, wedged a broken chair into the door. But he knew there were other ways to reach the basement.

In minutes he'd be caught here. And there was no sign of the things he sought. The body must be somewhere in the building, but he couldn't find it. And he thought: given a little more time, Cummings would cleverly dispose of all incriminating

CHAPTER SEVEN

Then Pat's keen eyes saw a green feather and a bell clanged joyfully in his mind. Marjorie's hat! He'd loosened that feather in his roll with her on her apartment floor. It had fallen off here—before the door of the heater room which was locked. So he grabbed his pistol and blew the lock off the door.

Police and detectives were swarming into the basement as Pat threw open that door. Behind it was the jackpot!

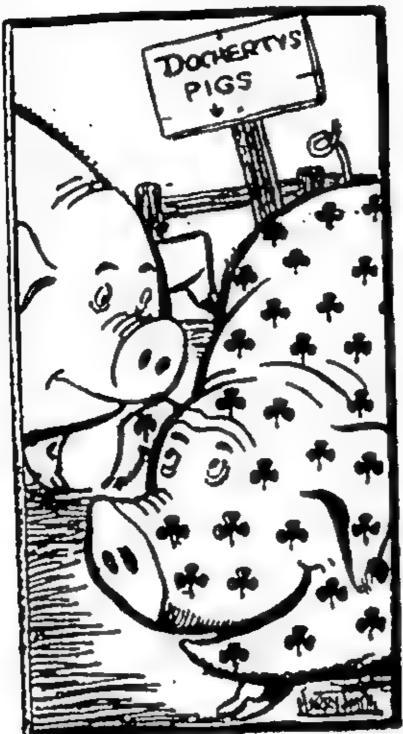

Wip's corpse was on the floor. Young Harling's had been dragged into the room and lay against the heater. Toad stood, the fight gone out of him, mopping his gory nose. Marjorie was standing, slump shouldered, near the door. Behind her was Sylvia, pistol in land. She soon let it fall to the floor. The police crowded around behind Raffigan as he uncapped the acid.

"Don't try to shoot," he told Sylvia.
"Or you'll get this. You threw it at my face, and missed. But I promise you, I won't."

TCHAIKOVSKI — ANA

There is coming to the Lee Theatre a film called "Song of My Heart", based on the life of Peter Hylch Tchaikovski. The film is an Allied Artists' production made in America, and from the advance publicity matter I have seen it promises to be a very good produc-

A newcomer to the American screen, Frank Sundstrom, plays the part of Tchaikovski. He has been a top-line film-star for some time in his native Sweden. As a musical biography of one of Russia's best-loved composers, the pre-views from America rate this film very highly.

Amongst the music to be heard are excerpts from his 4th, 5th and 6th Symphonies, the No. 1 B-Flat Plano Concerto, Swan Lake and Casse Noisette Suites, Capriccio Italienne, 1812 Overture, Romeo and Juliet Fantasie, the lovely Andante Cantabile and the Barcarolle. A representative enough selection to please all but the most fastidious of tastes, surely!

Audrey Long (a name new to me) plays the beautiful Italian girl with whom Tchaikovski falls in love. She came to the screen as a result of a critique in a San Francisco newspaper relative to her performance in a Theatre Group presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream". In her own words, Audrey Long says "I appeared in that Shakespearian play shortly before graduating from High School. We staged the play at the little town of Saratoga and I didn't even know the papers were covering it.

"Two days later I got a call from Hollywood. Max Reinhardt had heard of the nice things the reviewer had said of my performance in 'A Midsummer Night's Dream'. The ultimate result was work under Reinhardt and a studio contract'". Her part in the film is that of Princess Amalya who not only falls in love with Tchaikovski but also succeeds in helping him to get his music published.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke appears in the film as Audrey Long's father, a part which gives him every opportunity to put over yet another polished portrayal for which he justly has earned an enviable reputation.

Gale Sherwood plays the part of the composer's wife, and she, too, I believe, is a newcomer to the screen although well known on the American stage. She should know how to sing, as I understand she broadcast over the CB.C. network at the age of two.

Ballet-lovers are not forgotten, since a generous excerpt from the "Swan Lake" Ballet is portrayed by 120 dancers. These dancers are drawn from the Ballet Russe, New York Metropolitan Opera, Ballet Theatre, Sadlers Wells and La Scala, Milan.

The story of the film, subjected to a certain poetic licence, is told by a Russian Officer whose father had once boen valet to Tchaikovski. He tells of Tchaikovski's marriage to Sophia, whom he divorces, and of his meeting with Princess Amalya. She it was who made possible the publication of his music. Her affair with him was, however, interrupted by her father, and Tchaikovski - disillusioned by the broken romance -- leaves Russia to undertake a tour of Europe and England. His music receives a rapturous reception, and he returns to his native Russin, a popular figure, whose music became everlastingly popular. The Princess Amalya secures her father's permission to go and see him and to resume their affair. But arriving in Petragrad, she finds Tchaikovski a victim of a cholera epidemic and he dies, as the Princess arrives at his bedside.

So much for the story, but, as with "Lilac Time", it is the music that counts and of this, there is generous measure, full and overflowing. Even a cosmopolitan in his music, Tchaikov-ski — by means of some genius bestowed on him — was able to assimilate and reproduce the idlom of Italy, and

Contributed By "MUSETTA"

Spain in his music as to the manner born. In the two famous suites "Capriccio Italienne" and "Capriccio Espagnole", he shows this trait very clearly. The Russians equally regard him as a national hero, typically representative of Russia in his music, so that —more nearly than any other composer—Tchalkovski achieves the electic ideal.

In his Chamber Music, Tchaikovski was influenced almost exclusively by the Russian idiom, and all his three string quartets are based on Russian folk-themes The lovely and justly-popular Andante Cantabile from the 1st String Quartet is based on a folk theme communicated to the composer by a carpenter of the Government of Kalluga in Great Russia.

All in all, then, Tchaikovski has proved to be one of the great names in music and without that solemnity and macabre orchestration which characterised some of his contemporaries There is a quality of tenderness about his music, evidenced very well in the "Romeo and Juliet" Pantasie. "The, Swan Lake" Ballet, of all ballets, must surely be the most popular in the repertoire. Whist in no way decrying the choreography, it is, I feel, Tchaikovski's music that sets the seal of charm and grace so permanently on this Ballet. However, enough has been said of this before by more qualified pens than mine, so, discretion being the better part of a typewriter, I'll leave it at that!

Perhaps the out-and-out purist will find it within him to quibble at any liberties taken with the story, but generally I think this is an excusable item. At least, Tchaikovski's death from cholera is authentic and in fact it occurred 10 days before the first performance of his last (No. 6) symphony. Many, like myelf, go to this type of film purely for the sake of the music. If the script-writers find it necessary to provide a story as a sort of peg on which to hang a story, does it matter? Those who are sufficiently interested will, in any event, know enough of his true life story for it, not to matter.

It is the music and the ballet, surely, which count, and of this, it seems, we are prosmised generous measure. Anyway, it is a film I look forward to attending and if its reception here is as good as in America, I think there is a treat in store for an music-lovers.

SUNDAY

Although only of short duration. there is a programme at 11.50 a.m. when a programme of choral music is being sung by the Glasgow Orphans' Choir, which calls for attention. This choir, conducted and trained by Sir Hugh Robertson, is one of the most famous in existence today, its reputation having been well and truly carned solely by virtue of its musicianly interpretations of the standard and specially arranged choral works. There is a generally accepted opinion that the Orphans' Choir is a choir par excellence, setting a standard uniqualy its own by which others stand or fall in comparison.

The Symphony Concert at 9,45 p.m. produces an interesting bill of fare which comprises:—
Symphony in G. Minor K.550 Mozart No. 1 Planoforte Concerto Brahms Polka & Fugue from "Schwanda" Weinberger raking the last as first, for no reacson at all, "Schwands the Bagbiper" was first produced at Covent Garden, I seem to recall, in about 1934. I am open to correction here, as I rely completely on memory and cannot check the reference. I do remember, however, that Ernest Lewman, Richard Capell and Fox-Strangways all gave it a warm reception in their various papers at the time. It was the first new operatic work to be produced in London for many years' and as such, was doubly welcome. It is full of good tunes and lilting rhythms, typical examples of which are to be heard in the polka and fugue represented in the Symphony Concert tonight.

The magic touch of Mozart's incomparable music is something so often commented on in these notes that the mere mention of one of his works is enough in itself.

The G. Minor' Symphony was written in 1788, at which time, mirabile dictu, Mozart was a young man of only 32 years. In the short—Incredibly short—time of six weeks he wrote the 39 and 41 (Jupiter) symphonies, besides the No. 40 (G. Minor) symphony. What intense creative skill has gone into the making of these immortal works—averaging but two weeks per symphony—can only be left to the imagination, if it does not boggle at the magnitude of the conception.

Brahms' No. 1 Planoforte Concerto is a work, typically enough, redolent with an air of austere classsicism. Although lacking the charm and old-world grace of Mozart and without invoking the majestic sonority of the Beethoven concertos, it is nevertheless thoroughly enjoyable music.

MONDAY

Tonight, at 9.10 p.m., "Concerto Hour" brings to the air one of the best-loved and popular of pianoforte concertos, the Grieg in A. Minor. Such music as this is possessed of the true characteristic of all classical music—the quality of permanence and a capacity for never-failing charm.

Into this concerto, Grieg has poured a host of lovely melodies, influenced, no doubt, by many of the folk tunes of his native Norway. Grandeur probably sums up the main impression this Concerto leaves, better than any other one word. It is popular—in every sense of the word—both with performer and audience and if its quality is not such as to evoke the plaudits ascribed rightly to the Beethoven and Mozart concertos, it has justly earned for itself a niche in the hall of piano fame.

TUESDAY

At 9.45 p.m. a Chamber Music recital brings us the "Golden" Sonata of Purcell. Reminiscent of Handel and Hayden in many respects, this sonata is one of the few which has lived from the welter of music emanating from the Elizabethan era, or thereabouts. While Purcell is the only English composer of note to have held equal sway with the furmidable battery of talent presented by Haydn, and Bach, it is the more interesting to know this sonata more than holds its own.

Lately I have been receiving quite a number of letters from you children on the theme ''kindness Often Pays''.

I am really glad to know that you understand what it means and how important it is.

. Yes, this phrase ''kindness often pays'' is very true and I believe in it too.

No matter what little kindness you have done, it is sure to come back to you, and double too.

You might say, ''I have been good to Jane, but she never returns any kindness to me. '' That's not right, for you must not expect kindness to be paid in the same way, but from a different and unexpected source.

Kindness is so important, it is just like sprinkling scent on somebody. You nearly always enjoy some of the perfume yourself. Happy days to you all, from

HOW PERCY PIG CURLED HIS TAIL

Percy Pig stood in a corner of his sty feeling very sad. All his eight little brothers and sisters were grunting, and squealing, and behaving just as little pigs always do, but Percy felt he could not join them.

You see, they had eight lovely curly talls—but Percy's tail was straight, and, because of this, none of them would play with him.

"If they won't play with me I'll go away—and find out how to make my tail curl," sobbed Percy, He squeezed under the gate of the sty and trotted down the rond.

"Tek-tek-tek," clucked hirs.

"Tek-tek-tek," clucked hirs. Buff Orpington, the brown ben, pecking at some grit. "Where are you off to Percy?"

"I'm going to find out how to curl my tail," answered Percy politely. "Could you tell me how!"

"I'm too busy hiding my eggs in the nettle patch. Go and ask Sarah Shorthorn," suggested Mrs. Buff Orpington.

Sarah Shorthorn, the cow, was lying under an oak tree, lazily chewing her cud.

"Please," squeaked Percy Pig to her, "could you tell me how to curl my tail?"
"No-c-o-o," lowed Sarah. "I'm too busy feeding. Go away."

Percy trotted sadly away—no one seemed to help him. Then he saw a gnat flying round and round a post.

Percy followed the gnat but, when he'd trotted gound the post for the 50 time, he felt dizzy. He twisted his tail around the post to keep himself up. Still the gnat flew round and round, and after it went Percy, till at last it flow away.

Percy sat down to get his breath back. Carefully be untwisted his tail but to his suprise, instead of sticking straight out behind him, it twisted up again quickly into the curliest tail any little pig could want.

"Oh, my bristles and trotters!" exclaimed Percy. "I've done it! I'm the curliest-tailed pig that ever was."

He was so excited that he started to trot home—then he remembered Sarah Shorthorn. He ran up to her and said, "Look, my tail's curly."

But Sarah closed her eyes and went to sleep without even looking at Percy's tail. Percy was too excited to mind.

He ran on to where Mire. Buff Orpington was sitting in the nettle bod. "Look-look at my curly tail," he cried. "I've laid another egg," ex-claimed Mrs. Buff Orpington, and she never even looked at Percy's tail. But Percy didn't mind. alipped under the gate back into. the sty just in time for dinner and not one of his eight little brothers or sisters pushed him away. What's more they didn't even look at him. You see-Percy's tail was so curly now, that he was just like the rest of them, so there was no need for them to stare because he was different. And as for Percy, he was the happiest little pig in the sty.

find it. Six days dragged by and Johnny wouldn't eat anything, only a plain biscuit. He said he couldn't eat because he kept thinking about his dog being lost and hungry and he wouldn't eat until he found Laddie again. Then he went to a newspaper office and asked them to try and get the dog back for him. They published photos of Johnny every day and told his story and asked if anyone had seen the dog would they please ring them.

Hundreds of people rang and the newspaper reperters took Johnny in a car to visit the homes of people who said they thought they had found the dog. But each time they visited a house the boy took one look at the dog and shook his head. It wasn't his.

All's Well That Ends Well

Horace Lagard was very old indeed. He was almost a 102 years old. Hw lived with his grandson and his grand daughter-in-law together with their little boy in a small cottage about two miles away from a village. Horace was a grumpy old man forever meaning and greaning about something: He suffered from lumbage and general bad health. He abhored all modern inventions and would not allow a telephone in the house and his grandson the younger Monsieur Lagard had to argue for two whole days with him before he was allowed to keep the little third hand automobile which he had bought at a junk sale.

One day at lunch time when had bought at a junk sale.

One day at lunch time when the younger Monsieur Lagard had gone to Orleans on business in his little car, Horace was selzed with a frightful choking fit for a fish bone was stuck in his throat. "Ma ma!" screamed the youngest Lagard who was with his great grandfather. Poor, great grandfad has got a fish bone stuck in his throat, he is coughing terribly."

Madame Lagard who was at that moment preparing the pudding, hastened to the spot of this frightening happening. "A doctor really ought to be fetched." she said. But there was no telephone and car, "Quickly, mon petiti" she said, "Fetch some bread. The child ran off at full speed to the kitchen, and returned shortly with a hunk of bread. Madame Lagard hastily stuffed it down Horace's throat. This however did not seem to

This however did not seem to the choking, sooner had he swallowed it he then began to cough more easily, now water was poured down into the unhappy patient's gullet but it became worse, and after an hour of coughing Monsieur Horace Largard passed away, more from exhaustion than anything else.

Madamo Lagard dropped to her knees and - said, -- The Lord be thanked, poor Horace will be happier in heaven and we can now have a telephone and a little rest and peace!! The little Largard, a naughty child, concluded, "All's well that ends well."

Benny was a very busy little boy. He was the son of a farmer. During the summer holidays he spent his time mostly in the farm. Benny got up at five o'clock and went to the farm to see the animals. He loved the animals and the animals loved him too.

-Benny helped his father to milk the cows and carried the pails of milk to the dairy for his mother. "When his mother said !!
It was time for breakfast, he was very hungry then and had two plates of porridge, two slices of bread and eggs with bucon. After he had finished his breakfast he went to feed the pigs. The pigs gobbled up the food quickly as they were hungry too.

Then Benny Went to see the hens and took the eggs from the hens and took the eggs from the hen house and put them in a basket to be taken to the market for sale.

After dinner Benny usuarily would go to the meadows and look at the horses and watch them eat julcy grass, and sometimes he would go to the market with his father. When his father had sold all the things he bought to the market he would give Benny a shilling.

That's how Benny spend a day during his holidays and so Good-night.

Chubby And The Barber Pole

By Carol Coliver Whenever Chubby walked past Mr. Womble's Barber Shop on the main street of town, he looked longingly at the red and white striped barber pole just outside the door. That was because he thought It was the biggest peppermint stick in the world. It was all he could do not to stop and have a lap at it. He would have done just that, if it weren't that Mr. Womble was always standing in the doorway whenever Chubby went by. Ho never seemed to have anything else to do.

On one particularly hungry day, Chubby could stand it no longer. He stopped in front of the barber shop and even though Mr. Womble was standing in the doorway, as usual, the little boar stood up on his hind logs, grabbed the bar-. ber pole with his front legs and impped!

What a disappointment! The huge red and white peppermine stick didn't taste like anything at all. Chubby couldn't believe it pos-sible. So he had a second land and then a third. But there was still no flavour!

He was just about to walk away in disgust when Mr. Womble opened the door of his shop and stopped outside. In his hand he held a peppermint stick, which he offered to Chubby. Even though it wasn't the biggest one in the world, it dia taste just like peppermint! In fact, the flavour was so good that Chubby sat right down on the sidewalk in front of Mr. Womble's Barber Shop to ent it.

He sat there for a long time, leaning his back against the red and white barber pole and lapping at the peppermint stick, Meanwhile, Mr. Womble stood in the doorway and watched him. Suddonly he had an idea. He disappeared into the back of his shop for a while. Then he returned, carrying a big cardboard sign. He hung it on the barber pole, over Chubby's

Mr. Womble did not stand in the doorway much longer after that, For in a very few minutes the customers started piling in and Mr. Womble soon had more work to do than he had had for months.

While Mr. Wombie worked, Ohubby just sat outside the shop. happily lapping his peppermint ... stick. Little did he suspect that there was a sign just above him which said-

PROGRAMME NEWS British Industries Fair

The British Industries Fair opens at London and Birmingham on May 2 and will last until May 13. As in previous years, the BBC will present a radio picture of this vast fair, with its remarkable display of goods for the world's buyers, showing the versatility and progressiveness of British industry. In a feature programme, produced by Berkeley Smith, called 'Report from the Fair, overseas listeners will hear about the busy scene from Richard Dimbleby and Audrey Russell in London and Ted Parkinson, Peter Cairns, and David Martin in Birming-

Moving among the crowds that will throng the alley-ways between the stands, the BBC's reporters will talk to buyers and exhibitors, 'eavesdrop' on negotiations taking place, and, where language is a bar, hear the three-way conversations between buyer, exhibitor, and interpreter taking place daily all over the Fair. General Overseas: Wednesday, 5.30 p.m.

The Late Cardinal Hinsley

The late Cardinal Hinsley, wartime leader of English Roman Catholics and prime mover in the efforts towards co-operation with other Christian churches, is the subject of this week's BBC talk 'Churchmen in Profile.' Cardinal Hinsley, who died in 1943, was known all over the world in connection with "The Sword of the Spirit."

General Overseas: Sunday, 12.45 p.m. Sport From Britain

There is plenty of cricket in the BBC programmes this week. Summaries will be broadcast of the second match of the New Zealanders' English tour, against Worcestershire, on Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the New Zealanders make their first London appearance of the tour, when they play Surrey at the Oval. E. W. Swanton will summarise each day's play for listeners. Then, on Saturday, the New Zealanders begin their game against Leicustershire, and, in addition to a summary, the match will be dealt with in 'Saturday' Sport' (General Overseas: 11 p.m -- 1.00 s.m.). Overseas listeners will also hear in 'Saturday Sport' a commentary by E W. Swantott on the County Champlonship match between Glamorgan, and Warwickshire.

A commentary on the International Grand Prix at Silverstone will, too, be included in 'Saturday Sport.'

Timings of these broadcasts can be found in the programme pages of this Bulletin.

Paging Dame Nature "Life has taught me many thingsone of them being not to prophesy."-

A cagey little politician. We, on the other hand, are one of Life's most backward boys. It hasn't taught us anything, at all.

We are still tricked into dialling "TOL" during the rush hours—say, from 9 a.m. until midnight-although our instinct for self-preservation warns us that we are taking a path that leads straight to the asylum and the grave.

Indeed, so little has Life taught us about telephones that even to this very day we believe that theatre boxoffices and ticket agencies may answer the things if sufficiently provoked.

Probably we are the only living person to be astenished when the genuine, mushroom spawn comes up mustard-and-cress.

We are constantly surprised to find that it costs a penny to learn that a weighing-machine is out of order.

Only recently on a pier we put a coin into a machine labelled "A Hot Night in Paris," and were amazed that all we saw for our money was a horse-drawn fire-engine golloping down Victorian Ficet-street. We are Life's outstanding dunce.

Until we actually taste it, we fondly believe that the bottled witches' brew that wine-walters carry reverently in their little wicker baskets must be something better than we can stew up at home in our bath.

We are even tempted to choose those items on the menu at which maitres d'hotel point their scornful pencils, although, had Life taught us a damned thing, we should have ourself certified first, well knowing them to be hashed vultures' bones

And so, untaught at Life's knee, we go on our puzzled way, obediently saying "Players, please," to girls in empty kiosks; refusing to be vague to cynical barmon; hopefully expecting to find more room in the rear of tube trains; forever foothardily tuning-in to our "favourite" programme to hear our "favourite" entertainer singing our "favourite" song ("Buttons and Bows").

Ah, Mother, Mother! Heaven defend your wandering boy tonight

The bidding at the Congress in Galway last week-end was not all of the standardised type. One of the departures from the orthodox was a psychic opening bid on this hand:

> SAKJxx H 10 x x C 10 9

> > D 10 9 x x

CKQ84

SQXX HA9XX DKxx C 6 5 2

E DAXXX CAJ73 S 9 x H K J x

North, the dealer, opened with One Club, a very odd form of psychic bid. East doubled. It is now usual to make a weakish take-out double but not one quite so weak as this. South redoubled, West bid One Heart, North and East passed and South bid Two No-trumps, which closed the bidding.

North was hoist by his own petard. His opening psychic bid frightened him into later silence and a game was made in No-trumps which was missed in the bidding. It is an interesting hand where Three No trumps can be made but not Four Spades, the contract at some tables.

North's psychic bid was not one with any likely future. There is no harm in experimenting with a pay-.chic .bid .provided .one _chooses .a ..bid .- such as the semi-psychic One Notrump overcall, which is likely to yield a tactical advantage. What North did not realise was that a strong suit of Spades has in itself such great defensive value that to supplement this with a psychic bid was really painting the lily. North may not have realised too that if opponents secure the contract, South will waste his entry cards on leads of Clubs.

"I cannot see any angle from which North's psychic bid is likely to develop a tactical advantage. This type of psychic bid should therefore be avoided. There is plenty of scope for successful semi-psychic bids on which it is more remunerative to concentrate. Many successes are due to the proper handling of these bids. They are, of course, dangerous with a weak partner but one need not use them then.

Chinese Jade

A London audience recently admired magnificent examples of Chinese craftsmanship in jade. They were used as illustrations in a talk by a well-known expert on China's art and archaeology, Mr. Howard Hansford, in a second series of lectures at the Courtauld Institute of Art. The subject of this lecture was the place of jade in Chinese ritual and religion: Mr. Hansford explained that the close association ... throughout the ages arose from the intrinsic nature of the material itself which was an apt symbol of perfection and the indestructibility of delty and heaven.

Confucius himself, in his writings. had explained, "The ancients held jade" because of its many beautiful qualities. to be symbolic of virtue, wisdom, equity, propriety, music, loyalty and good faith.

By JANET MARTIN

There are many charming styles, among the parade of summer fashions which are ideally suited to the fuller figure-or."Luno" figure as it has been christened by a famous London house.

The days of special, but staid and oh! so unimaginative styles for the larger figure have, thank heavens, long gone by. There are, of course, houses who specialise in full-size models, but they no longer design creations which no one else would dream of wearing.

Shipbuilding In Britain

London, May 7. Britain's merchant marine has replaced 11,000,000 of the 12,000,000 tons of shipping lost through enemy action and is still building. Mr. Alfred Barnes, Minister of Transport, declared today. Mr. Barnes told the annual general meeting of the Morcantile Marine Association that Britain's combined dry cargo and tanker fleets are only a million tone below their pro-war strength and "our oversess trade links are being steadily re-escatees ',A being steadily re-established. -Associated Press.

TRADE

Sydney, May 6. Mr. G. P. Pillal, Indian Trade Commissioner to Australia, said today that trade between India and Australia had shown a steady improvement during the eight months ending February.

"It is significant that India is next only to the United Kingdom and the United States of America in respect of the import trade of Australia," he odded.

Mr. Pillai said that during the eight-month period Australian imports from India were valued at A£18,713,000 compared with Indian imports from Australia of A£14,550,000, giving India a favourable balance of A£4,163,-900.- -Reuter.

Rocky Graziano Re-Instated

New York, May 6. Rocky Graziano, former world middleweight boxing champion, who has been under suspension in New York State since February 7, 1947, for failing to report an alleged prize, was re-instated today by the State Athletic Commission. Chaziano won the middleweight title from Tony Zale in 1947 and lost it to Zale in 1948. Graziano has been training for a comeback although he is barred in all States covered by the National Buxing Association.

Mr. Abe J. Greene, Commisits ban against him.

Mr. Green said that Graziano had made restitution for running out on a bout with Fred Apostoli, which was to have taken place in Garland, California, on De-ceember 1, 1948. It was this action that precipitaled his suspension in California. His re-instatement in California is only a technicality, Mr. Green said, and he is expected to be cleared as soon as the Commission holds another meeting, which
